Last Updated on November 28, 2020 by Irene SetoRepurpose hardcover books into this beautiful folding art book Isn't this the coolest folding art book you've ever seen? I saw this folded book style in the store one day and thought, I can make it myself! After several months of delays, some googling and some errors in book folding, I have learned some best practices for folding words onto pages to make the book's art fold the most beautiful. These folding books make great gifts for weddings, baby showers, birthdays, and wonderful additions to any home or office. Follow my beginner book folding tips below to get started. How folded book art is made To wrap my head around this confusing concept, I turned to Youtube to watch what the folding art process of this book looks like. I watched a lot of videos like this below. Free book folding art template to download For those of you who are useless with Photoshop, here is a free book folding template that you can print yourself. Print the folding pattern of the book in landscape orientation as it will come out on more than one sheet of paper. This free folding art pattern book is for the word love. I have built it in three different sizes depending on how many pages your book has. Select which has fewer pages than any book you have. For example, if your book has 476 pages, choose a smaller 450-page book folding template to use. This is a difference of 26 pages so count half of the pages (13) in front that will not be folded. When you're done following the following fold the book template, you will have 13 pages left on the back as well). Love - Book folding template 350 pages Love - book folding template 400 pages Love - 450 pages folding book template Use different words to share your message: home for household gifts, newborn baby names for baby gifts and so on. Choose the right book to fold Find good hardcover books in secondhand shops around town. I also love hoarding books at yearbook sales like the CBC Calgary Reads Big Book Sale or the RESET Society of Calgary book sale. I recommend buying a book with at least 300-400 pages as it will usually include most words to fold. I find that 4-5 letter words are the best length to work with. I've done up from 7 letters, but the problem is that your book is going to fold into a pretty crazy accordion that makes it hard to actually read a word. More or less better. You will need approximately 80 pages per letter although this may vary depending on how much your page sheet thinks, how long the book is etc. Pull back the cover jacket on the hardcover book to see what's underneath. All books have beautiful covers and colors to choose from especially if you want to do a specific decoration theme. Sometimes you might want to find a specific book to use if there is a special memory attached or for someone's favorite author and such. Stay away from the mystery book section - I found the book title doesn't make a very nice gift for anyone else lol. Make sure the edges of the yard are flat. Sometimes books are deliberately published with deckle or jagged edges but this will make your craft project much harder to fold. I prefer books that are not too tall and not too small. Since the art of a folded book is meant to be home decorating, you want to find the right sized book in the size of the cover and the number of pages to use. Check if the spine and yard are intact. You don't want the page to fall out when you fold make sure the page is easy to fold. I made the mistake of buying an older hardcover book that was well worn. The pages were very thick and pulpy. When I fold, the page will start cracking and tearing easily. Needless to say, this was very frustrating because I was trying to make something beautiful. Having an extra folding book is useful to use as a practice. The art of my first folding book was full of folding problems and it turned out to be nonsense. Easy book folding art tutorial UPDATE November 2020: I have to give full credit to the secondhand blog look around for this tutorial! I have been following this method for years. Now that the site no longer works, I added this info here, but we won't be able to This is without his extraordinary expertise. Thank! There are several different ways to make these books with many book folding templates available on the Internet. But the folded art tutorial book below is my method of choice. Believe me, I see many different options, but I like this particular method because: because: A very useful Photoshop template to update and modify or you can borrow one of mine above for free. This template allows you to use any font and any word you like. You can also use books with different number of pages instead of having to find a specific book to use. No rulers or pencils are required to mark the spacing and specifications for each page. You just follow the template you created that is much simpler to use. Supplies required to photoshop fold the book in your computer printer and paper size 8.5 x 14 (legal size) Scissors and / or box cutter Pencil Ruler Elastics (extra large) Heavy book or other weighted objects Set the book folding template Spend a lot of time checking your Photoshop template to make sure it is done correctly and correctly. Step 1: Download this blank PDF template and save it to your computer. Step 2: Open the PDF in Photoshop. You'll see a series of lines with page numbers at both ends. For those of you who don't have access to Photoshop, I'm trying to figure out how to create templates on more accessible tools like Word etc but it doesn't seem to work. Meanwhile, ask a friend who knows how to Photoshop to help you set up your template! Step 3: Create a layer of text boxes and enter the words you choose such as home, Jessica, love, etc. What a PDF template looks like To increase the font size if necessary to make the letters the height you want. Think about how tall your book is and plan the appropriate letters leaving enough space at the top and bottom. I find I am often over 200 or 300 pt size depending on the font selected. Center your words on your template to best match the size of the book cover you're using. Step 4: Drag your text box to the far left so that the beginning of your first letter is overlaid to the very edge. Now zoom your screen to about 50% so you can read the page numbers at the bottom of the template. Scroll to the last letter of your word while keeping page numbers visible. Step 5: You now need to stretch your text box to match the number of pages in your book. With your mouse, select the right edge of your text box (not the corner) and make the box wider. Drag the text box until the last letter is coated to the number of pages in your book. This helps organize rulers so you can easily find page numbers. Stretch the text box to the right to spread your word across the template. For example, my book is 451 pages so I set the ruler on that mark. I then dragged the edge of the last letter to meet line 451. Other font and template tips Fill in the too thin parts of the letter. This will help with the folding process at a later date! Create your letters bold by hand Play around with different fonts to make sure the letters are bold. When you fold the page to fit the outline on the template, you don't want the letters to be too thin and difficult to fold. I sometimes draw on my print templates to widen parts of the letters that are too thin to fold. Folded, in your font Avoid having too many book folding breaks or distractions in the font/word you choose. This happens with typography that has a lot of embellishments such as chairie fonts. Try to have no more than three distractions in your design. As you fold these parts of the word, you'll find that you lose some detail as you try to create multiple letter sections with a very limited number of pages available. See the image below as an example. In this example, there are 3 black or all meeting distraction sections in the same row. Try not to have more than 3 distractions in your design as it may be too difficult to show typeface details. Print your book folding template It's time to print your template! I prefer to use legal size paper because it usually means only 2 sheets to work on. You can use regular 8.5 x 11 paper as well, but you will probably end up with 3-4 sheets for your template. You have to play around with your printer settings in order for the page to exit correctly. I prefer to save the Photoshop file as a PDF and then print horizontally to the page. I find everyone's printers a little different so you might need to do some printing process until you get the template to go out full page. Print your pages neatly and straight - if it comes out bent on a copier then your folds will end up crooked as well. Don't print both sides! Set up your book and print templates So before we get the folds, there are still a few more preparation steps. For your book, you need to set the starting point of the fold at the top and bottom. Holding the book closed, look down at the top of your book. Draw lines on all the pages of your book (about 1 inch from the spine). Flip it over and do the same to the bottom of the book as well. Use a box cutter or knife to cut a notch into a book, about an inch away from the spine. Using your box cutter or scissors, start scratching a small divot along the lines you've just drawing on the page. This notch piece will help you see where your crease line will begin. Complete the same notch pieces at the top and bottom of the book. Make sure this line has the same distance from the spine on both sides. Make sure your notch is visible on every page. You'll need it when you fold! For your print template, we need to create a fold edge to follow. At the edge of the length of your sheet (the bottom of your word) create a 1 cm fold on your print template. Do this to all your printout sheets. Create a small 1cm fold along the bottom edge of your print template. How to fold a book page Now it's time to finally get the book folded! Place your book on a flat surface with the spine facing away from you. Open into the first 100 pages or so and place the folded edges of the printed template along the left side of the book (which should be the bottom of the book). Pull the folded edges tightly along the edges of the pages of a book like this your book folds straight and even (you don't want your beautiful art to come out crooked!) Drag the sheet to start in row 1. Put down the 100 pages you picked up back. Where the lines are folded on the template should sit in the book. Open your book to page 1. Sometimes you may have a number of blank pages and introductions in the book before you get to the first page. Starting with the left side of the page, take an angle and fold it from the left notch piece to where the letter begins. Fold the folds well. Repeat on the right side of the notch to the letter. Once both sides are folded, turn the page. Always make sure your folds match the notch in your book. Repeat the folding process from left to right by moving your template sheet up one line as you fold the next page. Make sure the book's page numbers are always matched with the line numbers on your template. As you fold, you'll need to keep adjusting the template by moving it under another stack of pages. Keep the edges of your template folded tightly on each page. Continue this process until all the pages of your book have been folded! Continue to follow your template by matching page numbers and lines as your folds. What to do when there is more than one piece to fold you will get to the point in your template where you will have two or more different parts of the letter appear on the same line. Now what to do? Starting from the left side, fold both corners of the page to match the first part of the letter. Ignore the second part of the letter. Turn the page over. Now on the next page, fold the corner of the page for the second part of the letter. Ignore the first part of the letter. Turn the page over. In this letter a, fold the first part of the letter on one page. Flip and fold the second part of the letter on the next page. Continue going back and forth. Continue alternating back and forth until your template returns to one more folding section. If your word ends in three sections, follow the same premise to fold one part of a letter at a time until you complete the section. This is why it is important to choose a font that limits the number of distractions as mentioned above. As you fold, you will begin to see your words come to life! Tips during the folding process Use elastic to hold your finished page away from the page you are still working on. It also helps using the book's weight or weight on hand to stack it on top of the finished page. Use books or heavy-duty weights to help keep your book from moving as you fold. I love using this extra large Staples rubber band to keep the folded lawn out of the way as I continue to fold. With folded books that have 6 letters or more or if you find the spine of the book weak, you may want to tie the ribbon in the bottom of the book to keep your folding book art standing tall. Are you ready to get the crease? Practice makes perfect and I am really here to help you along the way. Comment below or or I @heyseto if you need any feedback about the art of your folding book. Good luck! Good luck making the best folding book art!
